SECRETARIES OF CONFERENCES AND MISSIONS

The following list of Secretaries, with their post office addresses, is published herewith as an aid to the Bishops and Conference Secretaries in making the transfers of preachers, especially during the time of the Conference sessions. Often they are hindered, if it should be the Fall Conference that is being held, in making the transfer to a Spring Conference, by not knowing to whom to send the certificate of transfer. It is hoped this may be of advantage both to the Bishop and the Secretary.

This list is correct according to the latest information. Conferences are designated (F) and (S) for Fall and Spring respectively.—EDITOR.

DEATH ROLL

DEATH ROLL

This Roll improves a little each year. If the Conference Secretary will see to it that he, or some one appointed by him, gathers the data asked for and fills out the blank that is sent to him and returns it to the Editor of the General Minutes it will help matters very much.

BISHOP JAMES MILLS THOBURN, D.D.

Born in Saint Clairsville, Ohio [March 7, 1836; died in Meadville, Pa., November 28, 1922], where Methodism got an early start and where the old church is now being replaced by the Thoburn Memorial Church, James Mills Thoburn, when a mere boy early in the fifties of the last century, sought preparation for his eminent career in the halls of Allegheny College. He resisted the temptation to begin the work for which he showed unusual fitness before the completion of his college course. In 1857, when he was twenty-one years of age, he graduated and was appointed to preach on the Marlboro-Greentown Circuit in what was then the Pittsburgh Conference, now the North-East Ohio.

The call to missionary work was as a fire in his bones, and when the opportunity was opened for him by the church in 1859 he set sail on what was then the long voyage to India.

For twenty-seven years he preached the gospel of the Kingdom in his clear, direct, incisive, and effective way over a large part of India, organizing churches, directing movements, introducing methods and leavening India with spiritual and ethical Christianity until he came into that general superintendency which was recognized by the General Conference of 1888.

His election was not the elevation of a man to a position of power and influence in the church. It was rather the recognition of an apostolic leader who by his vision, his initiative, his daring use of methods adapted to the field in which he was planting the good seed of the Kingdom, his disregard for conventions and long-distance advice which would only hinder the progress of the great work which he saw could be done in India and the whole of southern Asia—a leader who had simply risen by force of character and service to the position of general superintendent of the region over which the General Conference made him a missionary bishop. As in the case of William Taylor, the election of James M. Thoburn to the episcopacy added little to his honor or influence. But both these men appreciated the recognition of their work and accepted the authority conferred upon them because they loved the church and believed they could use the new commission for the advancement of the Kingdom to which their lives were devoted.

For twenty years he magnified that office, traveling at large through his Area and continually enlarging it. Having begun the great work in Malaysia which is now an episcopal Area, he had his eyes for years upon the Philippines, and when the way was opened by Dewey's guns he hesitated not to go to Manila though it was not in his Area, and began the work there which has likewise expanded into an Area, while India has now three episcopal residences to which general superintendents have been assigned.

Bishop Thoburn's part—and we need have no hesitation in extending the use of the title in connection with his name back of 1888—in the initiation of the movement to give the gospel at once to the outcasts—his early recognition of the importance of the work of woman in the redemption of India, his anticipation and indorsement of the deaconess movement in the whole church, his democratic attitude in the discussion and determination of the policy of the church, his contributions to the press and literature of missions—all these features of his career and work are well known.

No account of the influence and service of Bishop Thoburn would be at all complete if his visits to America in the days when he was doing so much for India on the ground were not included. Whatever may be said about the value of the frequent visits of bishops from foreign fields in these days, there is no question concerning the wholesome enlightenment and spiritual inspiration which Bishop Thoburn's messages brought to the home church in the last quarter of the nineteenth century. He spoke with the simplicity, the directness, the religious fervor, the ethical uplift, the practical sagacity, and the optimistic outlook of a prophet of God.

The celebration of the jubilee of his missionary service in 1908 at Meadville, the seat of his alma mater, marked the rounding out of the active career of one of the most remarkable and fruitful apostolic ministries of modern times. The spirit and service of the Methodism of Wesley were exemplified in an eminent degree in his life and work.

His friends gave him a home in Meadville, where he has lived quietly, for the most part in memory and anticipation, until the silver cord was finally loosed on Tuesday morning, November 28.

—Adapted from the Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

Submissive to Christ, Thoburn was his own man to everybody else. Independence of judgment was one of his notable traits. He was not content to allow a program to hamper progress, or to cling to outgrown methods, merely because they bore the seal of authority. Coming upon the field when missionary methods were in a formative stage, he applied himself with keen insight and practical sense to the problems as they successively took shape, and in dealing with them boldly struck out along new and often revolutionary lines, with no other guides than reason and faith. He was a Roadmaker, a Missionary Engineer. Again and again he broke out of the old geographical bounds which had been set for the India mission until its operations covered almost the entire peninsula and spread to Burma, Singapore, and the Philippines. He broke away from the exclusive habit of "native work" and invited and supported William Taylor in his revival campaigns among the English-speaking people, which resulted in planting self-supporting churches in many great city centers. He saw the weakness of employing only men as missionaries and encouraged his sister, Isabella, to come out as a pioneer of the women's missionary forces in India. He had been in India two years before he won his first convert. Such a missionary movement was too glacier-like for his ardent temperament, too wasteful of effort to justify itself to his common sense. He early abandoned it and turned his efforts to the low-caste village folk, the untouchables who were baptized first, and trained in Christian doctrine and ethics afterward. This turning to the common people was true to the genius of Wesleyanism. Moreover, its brilliant strategy has been approved by the engineer who said, "You Methodists are following the correct plan in your Indian evangelism of the depressed multitudes. Undermine long enough and you'll get the whole hill!" Many were the battles Thoburn fought with the powers at home in behalf of a more generous confidence in the native church, and larger grants of autonomy. And he lived to see the church of India making steady progress along broad highways for which he had painfully blazed the trails. That was Thoburn the Missionary Statesman.

Because he kept so near to Christ, and because of the wisdom and statesmanlike quality of his policies, Bishop Thoburn's leadership came to be accepted by the missionary community in India and eventually by the church at home. They felt that he was a saint, a seer, and withal a man of practical sagacity—one who knew how to convert his visions into accomplished facts. India sent him to the General Conference in 1876 and 1888. The General Conference enacted into law his plan for relieving India of absentee episcopal supervision by giving it a local episcopacy, and by an overwhelming vote made him their first bishop. And their love and honor have followed him in his retirement. Without spectacular qualities, with no special gift for dramatic eloquence, nevertheless by sheer force of spiritual endowment, breadth of sympathy and administrative skill he won recognition in India, America, and the world, as perhaps the greatest missionary of his generation, perhaps the most effective missionary leader that Methodism has produced.
